
The Sydney Morning Herald

12 February 2005

The Sydney Morning Herald published an article on the 'Top 100 Australians'. The list named 100 Australians “who really matter to the world ...who are making a difference” and this included Mesoblast founder and Chief Scientist, Professor Silviu Itescu.

Below is a quote on the reason why:

Silviu Itescu, medical researcher. “...as director of transplantation immunology at Columbia University Medical Centre, New York, he showed that certain adult stem cells from bone marrow could be used to repair damaged hearts.”
